Nurturing

Nurturing our spirit (or soul) is to provide a space for spirituality.

Whether it be cancer, fibroid tumor, a cyst, or gallstones, the practitioner must know that the Spirit indwelling his patient is perfectly and completely manifested, and that every shadow of erroneous conclusion is wiped out. False growth is neither person, place nor thing; it has no life to sustain it, cannot take root in Truth; it has no vitality, no substance and no power, and cannot be fed nor nurtured by Truth. Removing the Complex

Suppose someone is constantly saying: "Everything is all wrong in the world. People are wrong, things are wrong, conditions are wrong. All is sickness and unhappiness. Nothing seems worth while." You as a practitioner must not be disturbed by this complaint. It is your business to remove this complex, for these inner emotions create outer conditions, in and through the body, and are responsible for a great deal of sickness in the world. SOM P 236

Say this Prayer aloud twice a day:

The perfect Idea of God fills and occupies every nook and cranny of existence. There is no place where the Divine does not dwell. I am one with God's presence. I exist in a flow of love, intelligence and good. I live in a nurturing consciousness of Peace and Joy. Every day I look upon my life, which is God's creation, exactly as I believe it to be. And every day is a demonstration of God's eternal love forever blessing my mind with creative and prosperous thoughts. There can be no power in thoughts or feelings that would negate my joy. The power and the demonstration always come from a principle that defines God's goodness and how it shows up in my life. And...if your life is not what you want it to be (read this statement outloud) Today I am a blessing to all I know and all that exists. My life is always coming from Love'S fulfilling presence and God's great and glorious life. All is well and unfolding as it should. Thank YOU, God, for all my blessings and the goodness of this moment. AND TO IT IS!
