Here is our prayer for the week. I invite you to contemplate it daily:

“The world belongs to the energetic.”—Ralph Waldo Emerson

“Be like a tree and let the dead leaves drop.” –Rumi

God is the initial ignition that activates the engine of existence. I am one with this catalytic force and love is my fuel for forward motion. My creative thought is the driver on the highway of life’s opportunities. I am the kinetic momentum of Spirit, potentiated.

I know that in completing the chapter of the prior year, I allow the “dead leaves” of the growing tree of my life to effortlessly fall away from the trunk of my being, allowing fresh and fragrant flowers to bloom anew. I am no longer burdened by the desiccated branches of prior predicaments. I create space to embrace adventure, prosperity and joy. I ground my roots into the fertile pot of Principle, invigorating my being towards even greater experiences of unconditional love, light and life. I begin this new year refreshed, recharged and inspired by the Truth of my connection with the Divine. This world is a playground for my unbounded energy.

As I bask in the warm sunshine of Source, I water my soul with continued prayer, practice, patience and play. In moments of stillness, I am in tune with the gentle wind, through which the voice of God whispers with intuitive, indwelling guidance. I reach past the clouds of perceived conditions, and into the dawn of clarity. I am illuminated by a thousand rays of Divine daybreak and navigate each moment with peace.

I am grateful for the incredible growth experienced from my past, for they have brought me to the beautiful journey ahead. Empowered and energized, I begin a new story of limitless possibilities and complete abundance in every aspect of my being.

I release my word in Law, knowing that my new beginning is already made manifest.

And so it is.
