Here is our prayer for the week. I invite you to contemplate it daily:

“When we are being our real selves, we are expressing our true thoughts and feelings without fear, doubt, or the expectations of others diminishing that expression. When we live freely and fully from our true self, we are sharing our unique self with the world. That is both our life purpose and our greatest gift to others.” Chopra

I recognize that God is the One Source for all of creation.

I realize my unity with God, this great Source, knowing I am always supported with an unlimited supply of creative ideas and opportunities.

I live in an abundant world. I am moving forward into newer and greater experiences all the time; I am becoming more of who I truly am. I do not always know what to do, but I do know that something within me does. I know I am inspired and guided. I know that I intuitively know what to think, say, and do, for the greatest good for me and all those around me. I live from Love with the knowledge that God is my source. I am always inspired, again and again, with the new creative ideas and opportunities. When I reach the edge of my perceived limitation, when I dare to leap - I find that I can fly.

I am grateful that I am aware of this truth, of this knowing.

With love and gratitude, I release this prayer recognizing that its work is already done.
And so it is!
